Two Cowards.

A Union captain relates this story of a young negro named Jack, who was intrusted with the captain's canteen and haversack at the battle of Fredericksburg. He professed to be very courageous, but the moment the shells began to fall he disappeared, and carried the captain's accoutrements with him. The third day after the return of the regiment to camp, the captain saw the little scamp approaching—the most woe-begone looking contraband imaginable. His clothes were tattered and muddy, his corkless canteen hung spout downward, and his empty haversack was wrong side out.

There he stood, the tears trickling down his cheeks, so pitiable a sight that my own eyes moistened, and yet so extremely ludicrous that it seemed impossible to refrain from laughing. However, I got the mastery of both face and feelings, and said to him, in what was meant for a tone of severity, "You worthless, cowardly, little vagabond, what are you doing here, after running away with my food? Quick! if you have any excuse, out with it!"

"Yes, sah! yes, sah!" said he, "Ise got a seuse!"

"Well, then," I replied, "let's hear it."

"Well, sah—well, sah—I—I—Ise afeard you'll boot me!"

"Boot you? Why, there's nothing left of you to boot! But come, let's hear your excuse."

"Well, massa—massa cap'n—I wasn't any more coward'an you wah!" and then he boo-hooed louder than ever.

That was a flanker I did not relish; for in the meantime quite a crowd had gathered round us, and among the number several officers.

"Well, now, Jack," said I, severely, "you ran away, didn't you, before the first shell had fairly reached the wtaer?"

"Yes, sah."

"Well, Jack, did I run away?"

"No, sah."

"Why, then, you black rascal, how dare you tell me, in the presence of all these gentlemen, that I am as great a coward as you are?"

"Well, now, massa cap'n, I runn'd away 'cause I didn't dare to stay, and you stayed 'cause you didn't dare runn'd away."

Both.

The inhabitants of the north of England are a matter-of-fact people. In a village in one of the dales lived a kind-hearted but hot-headed woman, who entertained the minister when he came to preach there.

On the occasion of the first visit of one minister, wishing to know whether he preferred tea or coffee for breakfast, she went to the foot of the stairs and called out the name of her guest. There was no answer.

After waiting awhile, she called again and was answered with, "What do you want?" in anything but a gentle tone of voice.

"I want to know whether you'll have tea or coffee to your breakfast?"

"I'll have either or both," was the odd and not over-courteous answer.

"You've got out on the wrong side of the bed, this morning," said the irritated dame to herself; "but I'll fit up yer order, my man!"

So saying, she went to the cupboard, took thence a tea-pot, and and putting into it equal quantities of tea and coffee, made a strong decoction for the preacher.

Presently he appeared for breakfast and realized that he had a strangely flavored beverage before him; so, pausing, he asked, "What's this, missis?"

"It's both, sir; and you shall either drink that or go without."

A New Trick of the Boys.

One evening last spring the family of Gen. Hickenlooper were startled by the sound of glass being shattered, and with the thought of thieves, the general made a round of his residence and his grounds in search of the offenders. To his surprise, there was not a visible indication of any attempt at housebreaking, and ever since that time the matter has been a mystery. A few evenings ago a neighbor of Mr. Hickenlooper had a similiar experience, and the felks in the vicinity speaking of the affair, noticed that the six-year-old blossom of the family, a boy, who had a sense of hatred for soap, seemed much elated over the escape of the offenders, and on being concerned with the family shingle, admitted that "us kids" had done all the rreket. The scheme is the result of the ingenuity of one of the boys, and it is being worked very successfully to the terror of those afflicted with sensitive nerves. To work the matter the boys get large pieces of glass, and selecting an open window, slam the glass against the house and run. It never fails to work. From a convenient cover, the boys always enjoy the sight of the brave man or woman of the house trotting around with a lamp in one hand and a pistol or shotgun in the other. The scheme is now elaborated by one of the kids tossing a stone through an open window into the room, while a confederate breaks the bits of glass at the same time. This brings down the house every time.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Expert Testimony.

Little Nan, of four summers, considering it her duty to entertain a lady who was waiting for mamma, enters into conversation:

Nan—Have you any little girls?

The caller—Yes, I have two.

Nan—Do you ever have to whip 'em?

The caller—I'm afraid I have to, sometimes.

Nan—What do you whip them with?

The caller (amused)—Oh, when they've been very naughty, I take my slipper.

Nan (most feelingly, as mamma enters)—Y-yo-you ought to use a hair-brush; my mamma does, and it hurts awfully.

Ambiguous.

The resources of the English language are something extraordinary. By means of its valuable aid, one is not only enabled to say what he means, but also, in some cases, what he does not mean.

Its elasticity is admirably shown in the reply of an Irishman to a man who sought refuge in his shanty in a heavy shower, and finding it about as wet inside as out, said "You have quite a pond on the floor."

"Yis; sure we have a great lake in the roof."

DAYTON, OHIO.

It is wonderful to note the ingenuity with which the Americans plan to make money for church purposes. A lottery scheme is the latest! What next?

This week we call attention to the new sign which we have just put up over the News office. It was painted by Mr. Ned Harlan, and is said to be unlike any other in town. If you are desiring a sign, call and see ours before ordering.

We are much pleased to announce the progress and success of our West Side young men. Mr. George Crowley formerly, a West Side boy, is now business manager of the California Cackler, published at San Francisco, Cal. He has been there several years, and has made his paper one of success. Quotations from it may be seen in all of our poultry papers, showing its high standing among them. Our West Side young men succeed wherever they go.

All the talk these days is on the newly discovered elixir of life. That the mixture will prove a failure, will undoubtedly be the case. It has been experimented upon by our American medical profession, headed by Dr. Drummond, and universally pronounced to be a humbug. But at last a true elixir has been found. It is no other than an advertisement in the News. Try it, and your business will have all the sprightliness of youth. It never fails.

Small Boy's Composition on the Wasp.

A wasp is a six legged bird that lives mostly in trees and under the eaves of barns, and you can not tain him; he is too busy. Never stroke his fur the wrong way, because it makes him mad, and when a wasp is mad, I don't want nothin' to do with him. He has what they call "a stinger," and when he goes a stinging, boys must keep away from him. I leaned up agin one once when he was busy, and I jumped much as a foot. Ma had to put a mud pie on the place. I hit a wasp's nest with a stone once, and the boss wasp chased me clean acrost the lot so fast that when I got over the fence I tore my pants; then pa spanked me till I wished I had let the old wasp sting me.

Some say wasps make honey, but if their honey is as hot as their stingerin', I don't want none. Pa says the stingerin' ain't so bad at first as the rekolekshun of it for a few days. He ought to know, cos me and my brother Ike got on the roof and poked a big nest from the peek down in the barnyard while pa was milkin'.

The war Ministry of Bulgaria has ordered all three of the military classes of Servia to muster. The ostensible reason for the order is that the Bulgarian troops have been ordered to mass on the frontier, and Servia desires to be prepared for any eventuality. Eighty thousand Turkish reserves have been called out. The Porte is buying uniforms and stores, and work is proceeding at the dockyards with feverish activity.

A large building going up in Atlanta, is attracting considerable attention because of several inscriptions on its walls. "This Is the House That Jack Built" stands out in bold relief near the top of the structure. At the second story is the sentence, "J. N. Smith's Building; Commenced 100 Years after the Inauguration of George Washington as First President of the United States." A third inscription, cut in stone at the top of the first story, reads: "Paul Says Owe No Man; Let Posterity Take His Advice."

Berlin is very much taken with a young Cossack giantess now on exhibition in that city. She is only eleven years old, but is nearly nine feet high, and is still rapidly growing. She has large, dark eyes and a pretty face, and in the costume of the Don Cossacks, which consists of a red skirt, blue jacket, and long apron, embroidered in gold, she presents a most interesting appearance. It is said that she spends much of her time in playing with her dolls.
